

Call for Papers

The Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland invites submissions for a two-day conference on issues related to capital requirements for financial firms, to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, on April 12-13, 2012. The conference will bring together academics, policymakers, and market participants to discuss regulatory reform and the future of the financial system. The organizers are looking for a mix of theoretical and empirical papers (including country case studies) related to:

- Basel III capital and liquidity requirements
- The procyclicality of capital requirements
- The social and private costs of equity capital
- Subsidies for leverage
- Fair value accounting and other measurement issues
- Capital buffers and prompt corrective action
- Contingent capital and bail-ins
- Stress testing and capital planning

Please send completed papers or a detailed abstract by email to:

james.thomson@clev.frb.org and jhaubrich@clev.frb.org

and include “BANK CAPITAL CONF” in the subject line.

The deadline for submissions is January 31, 2012.