Tilburg University invites applications for Visiting (Associate) Research Professors in Macroeconomics or Financial Economics. The visiting research positions are aimed at attracting highly productive scholars. The positions are based at the Department of Economics or the Department of Finance, both of which are among the most research oriented in Europe. See:

JOB DESCRIPTION:

Commencing on an agreed date in the academic year 2009/10 the positions have a duration of approximately one year. Remunerated teaching of a graduate course can be arranged. The positions will allow interaction with Tilburg faculty and graduate students, and presentation of recent work. Tilburg's central location and research networks provide ample opportunities for short visits to other European research groups. The ideal candidate is a recently tenured Associate Professor from a top research department, but candidates at the seasoned Assistant or promoted Full Professor level are also encouraged to apply. Scholars working in the fields of macroeconomics and financial economics are welcome to apply. A special interest in the department exists in the area of banking. A visiting professor doing research related to banking will be associated with the European Banking Center. See:
