University of California, Riverside
Associate Professor in Empirical Public Economics

The Department of Economics at the University of California, Riverside invites applications for an Associate Professor position in the area of Empirical Public Economics. All areas of empirical public economics will be considered. Having broad interests in public policy and doing empirical research informed by economic theory will be viewed favorably.

JOB QUALIFICATIONS: Applicants must have a Ph.D. in economics or related field at the time of application, and an established record of excellence in research and teaching that merits appointment as an Associate Professor. The selected candidate will be expected to teach a Ph.D. level course that provides broad coverage of empirical work in public economics, as well as to teach in the undergraduate program; guide the research of doctoral students; be committed to an ongoing state-of-the-art research program; provide leadership in the Department; and render service to the university and profession. Salary will be competitive and commensurate with education and experience. Appointment will be effective July 1, 2020.

APPLICATION PROCEDURE: Applicants will be required to submit a cover letter of interest, a current CV, at least two samples of research that together illustrate both depth and breadth, a statement of contributions to diversity, evidence of teaching excellence, and the names and contact information of 3-5 references. Review of applications will begin on November 15, 2019 and will continue until the position is filled. Applications and supporting materials received by November 15, 2019 will receive full consideration. Applications and materials will be submitted using UCR's on-line application system located at https://aprecruit.ucr.edu/apply/JPF01170
